EDITOR'S NOTE

2016 — Primed For Growth

By Jade Moldé

The 2016 New Business Year has arrived — almost. This will come as a relief to some, as the 2015 Business Year brought challenges for dealers in the form of empty parking lots and dwindling sales numbers in the early part of the year. However, there are several promising signs that the “normalized” market is primed for growth.

After a slow start to 2015, Ruger, Smith & Wesson, Remington and Winchester Ammunition have reported an increase over quarters in 2014. In another encouraging sign, every month since May has seen firearm background checks post increases over the corresponding months in 2014. The months of June (886,825), July (946,528), September (1,071,945) and October (1,211,478) set records for the 17-year-old NICS system. With an election year looming, some dealers are hopeful these signs will lead to increased sales.

Your Source For New Business Year Planning

At Shooting Industry our aim is to help drive business. In an effort to ensure you have a successful start to the New Year, this issue of Shooting Industry is the first of two 2016 New Business Year Editions. In this issue, you'll find several business-building features, including a 2016 SHOT Show preview (pg. 42), the 2016 New Product Showcase (pg. 52) and the Universe's Greatest Buyer's Guide (pg. 76), which has the Industry Directory, Products & Services reference list and Distributors' Guide.

Publisher Russ Thurman examines the state of the industry and the numbers “beyond the ledger” in the 2016 New Business Year lead feature (pg. 34). Also in this New Business Year issue, dealers offered their 2016 predictions and the strategies they're implementing to compete with online-only retailers and encourage customer growth. You can see their forecast on pg. 36.

To top off SI's New Business Year offerings in this issue, Pat Covert takes a look at the growing youth market (pg. 48). This is an important market for the industry to reach, as younger shooters represent the next generation of hunters and target shooters. An active social media presence and community stewardship are effective ways to interact with Millennials.

Next month, you can expect additional New Business Year features in Shooting Industry, including the second half of the 2016 New Product Showcase, a SHOT Show extra and the outlook from several industry professionals as they provide their insights on the New Business Year.

How are you planning on making the 2016 Business Year a success? We'd like to hear from you; send an email to editor@shootingindustry.com. ☰

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Note From A Loyal Customer

This letter is in response to Taylor Smithfield's October 2015 Outdoor Marketplace column, "Loyalty Isn't For Sale, It's Earned":

There are several gun shops near where I live, but the one I go to most often has long-term employees, knows my name and treats people with respect. One pet peeve I have is to go in a store and see the salesperson stand and talk with his old buddy and ignore other customers. I've left stores like that time and time again; most often, those old buddies aren't buying anything. This is something storeowners need to watch out for — it's great to be friendly, but make friends with your potential new customers, too.

Shining Customer Service

Several years ago, I purchased a SureFire flashlight — the E2D LED Defender (200/5 lumen dual output). At the time, I wanted to upgrade my SureFire A2 Aviator I purchased back in 2004. I had been carrying that E2D everyday, until recently, when it began acting up. After a pleasant and professional conversation with a SureFire customer service representative, I was instructed to box up my light and to send it to them for repair. I also included a letter, which described the unit's behavior and sent it to their Fountain Valley, Calif., address. I expected to see my light returned with a new LED head, but what I received was very different ...

Just a couple weeks later, the UPS guy arrived with a package from SureFire, which had a brand new model E2D LED Defender Ultra (500/5 lumen dual output) with two batteries! They also sent me the invoice for a balance of "zero" — which was certainly unexpected, and over and above normal customer service. I wanted to let you know about this, and I'm grinning ear to ear right now.

After 19 years of carrying my Spyderco Military Serrated knife, I lost a screw from the handle. This knife has sentimental value, as it was presented to me in 1996 as a commemorative of the Colonel Jeff Cooper pistol course I attended during my long career with the Monterrey (Calif.) Police Department. I had carried that knife everyday since.

I contacted Charlynn at Spyderco's warranty department. She had me ship the knife with $5 to cover return mail costs. Two weeks later, I received my knife — cleaned and sharpened. Not only was the missing screw replaced, the other screws were as well so they all matched. The old screws were included in the box with my refurbished knife. Customer care and service like this is hard to find these days, hats off to Spyderco!

Industry Companies Honored At NASGW Expo

The 42nd Annual NASGW Expo & Annual Meeting was held at the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center in New Orleans, Oct. 27–30. Over 450 members met at the Annual Awards Dinner & Reception to launch the 2015 Expo, with several industry companies recognized by NASGW for leadership in two-step distribution.

Each year, NASGW recognizes companies that best demonstrate a commitment to the two-step distribution process, and who provide outstanding value and service. These awards are determined by four criteria: distribution policy; marketing, sales and promotion; logistics and operations and NASGW and industry support.

"We're thrilled to take this opportunity to recognize these companies for their support of both the industry and two-step distribution," said Kenyon Gleason, NASGW president.

The 2015 Leadership Award recipients were:

2015 Optics Manufacturer of the Year:

Leupold & Stevens Inc.

2015 Accessories Manufacturer of the Year:

Birchwood Casey

2015 Ammunition Manufacturer of the Year:

Hornady Manufacturing

2015 Firearms Manufacturer of the Year:

Ruger

2015 Importer of the Year:

IWI US

2015 Innovator of the Year:

Ruger

"On behalf of the over 2,000 Ruger employees, I want to thank NASGW for this recognition and both of these awards," said Chris Killoy, Ruger president and COO. "Ruger remains committed to the two-step distribution process and continues to strive to bring exciting new products to wholesalers, retailers and consumers."

"It is an honor to be recognized by our distribution and specialty retail partners, and one we deeply appreciate. They help us reach our core hunting and shooting customer throughout the country each and every day," said Bruce Pettet, Leupold & Stevens president and CEO. "On behalf of the more than 650 Oregon-based Leupold employees, I want to thank the members of the NASGW for their continued support of American manufacturing."

The NASGW Chairman's Award went to Wayne LaPierre, NRA executive VP and CEO. "Wayne's influence in the shooting sports industry is undeniable. He has been an incredible leader, and I am honored to present [this award]," said Pete Brownell, NASGW chairman.

In conjunction with the annual awards, a number of charitable donations were made by NASGW to the industry. A donation in the amount of $25,000 was made to NSSF, the Congressional Sportsman's Foundation and the Youth Shooting Sports Alliance. In addition, NASGW donated $50,000 to the NRA-ILA.

Editor's Note: Complete coverage of the 42nd NASGW Expo & Annual Meeting will appear in the February 2016 issue.

Five-Star Indoor Range Breaks Ground

A fully integrated retail, live-fire and experiential entertainment facility has started construction in Austin, Texas. The Range at Austin will be the first such range in central Texas, which will also feature firearms training and advanced education, armorer services and a private event space. The Range will have a 52,000-square-foot facility, housing 10,700 square feet of premium membership-only access space.

The Range has partnered with Action Target, who will oversee the shooting range design, development and equipment installation. The range will have 37 rifle-rated ranges, including five 100-yard rifle lanes with innovative targeting systems and video capture of target and shooter.

"The concept for The Range is unlike any shooting and firearms retail experience in the Austin market and exceeds the standards currently in place at other competitive luxury facilities," said Scott Dunaway, spokesman for The Range. "We'll provide customers the opportunity to demo a wide variety of firearms, from pistols to machine guns in a controlled setting with instruction and oversight on how to use it."

The range is scheduled to open next summer.

Federal Premium's $227,712 Grant Funds Occupation Training

Federal Premium, a brand of Vista Outdoor Inc., and Anoka-Ramsey Community College recently teamed up to earn a $227,712 grant from the Minnesota Job Skills Partnership.

The grant money will be used to fund an Occupation Training Program at Anoka-Ramsey Community College for Federal Premium line leaders, managers and supervisors to become more efficient at retraining and advancing their workers. The grant will help train 202 employees between June 16, 2015 and June 30, 2017.

The Minnesota Job Skills Partnership, which is part of the Department of Employment and Economic Development located in Saint Paul, Minn., helps fund educational grants to help companies enhance the skills of their workforce, improve work environment and sharpen leadership at multiple levels.

"This opportunity not only better develops our employees, it will positively affect our company's total output now and well into the future. MidwayUSA's Potterfields Receive Conservation Award

Larry and Brenda Potterfield, owners of MidwayUSA, recently received the John L. Morris award from the Association of Fish & Wildlife Agencies (AFWA) in recognition of their exemplary leadership in conservation and their lifetime commitment to fish and wildlife stewardship.

The award was presented Sept. 15 during the 105th Annual Meeting of the AFWA in Tucson, Ariz.

"We passionately believe in and support AFWA's vision for healthy fish and wildlife populations and habitats for long-term public benefit," Larry Potterfield said.

Criteria for the John L. Morris Award include non-political contributions that have been essential and far-reaching at the national or international fish and wildlife conservation level; outstanding assistance, service or support to the association, its member states, and/or their mission; diverse and valuable contributions to conservation objectives over a period of at least 20 years; and outstanding leadership in the conservation community.

"Since 2008, Larry and Brenda Potterfield have made over $100 million in charitable contributions, a large portion of which has gone to conservation partners, with a special focus on youth engagement," said Ed Carter, executive director of Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency.

SilencerCo Forms Technology Products Division

SilencerCo announces the formation of a technology products division called SilencerCo Weapons Research (SWR). The company has launched a video exploring the frontiers of bionic capability.

The SWR division was created to make hunting and shooting technologies accessible to everyone. That involves designing affordable and capable devices to enhance the shooter's ability to engage targets, positively identify prey in multiple spectrums and reduce shooter signature.

The initial SWR product offering was announced in September, and company officials say a steady pipeline of products will follow.

"All SWR products will address a particular hunting and shooting 'pain point' that has been tolerated for too long. While our core focus will always be on making firearms quieter, we saw an opportunity to innovate with technology products by focusing on what normal hunters and shooters need and want to make their experience better," said SilencerCo CEO Joshua Waldron.

All SWR products will carry SilencerCo's lifetime warranty.

Henry Repeating Arms Honors War Veterans

Anthony Imperato, president of Henry Repeating Arms, presented Henry Military Service Tribute Rifles to five distinguished combat veterans, including a 95-year-old veteran of World War II, in appreciation of their service during the Charlie Daniels 40th Anniversary Volunteer Jam at Nashville's Bridgestone Arena on August 12.

Honored were Jack ten Napel, World War II Marine survivor of the attack on Pearl Harbor, who went on to serve on every island in the Pacific; Scott Schroeder, double-amputee Army veteran of multiple combat tours in Afghanistan and Bronze Star recipient; Sam Schoenheit, a Marine veteran who survived an ambush shot to the head and a subsequent stroke; Ryan Weaver, a battle-hardened Army Black Hawk helicopter pilot in Iraq; and Scott Brown, Marine veteran of Operation Iraqi Freedom and co-founder of the Chris Kyle Memorial Benefit & Auction.

Imperato also presented Daniels with a customized Henry Golden Boy rifle embellished with the Volunteer Jam logo and an inscription reading, "Presented to Charlie Daniels. Thank you for your patriotism and all that you do for our veterans."

As lead sponsor, Henry Repeating Arms also donated $200,000 to The Journey Home Project, the nonprofit organization co-founded by Daniels that connects donors with the veterans' organizations that most effectively meet the health care, education and career needs of military servicemen and women and their families.

"We at Henry Repeating Arms are forever indebted to those who have served our country. Although we can never repay these men and women for what they've done for us, these rifles and our donation are a small token of our gratitude," Imperato said.

Safariland Acquires Majority Of Rogers Holster Co.

The Safariland Group has acquired a 65 percent ownership interest in Rogers Holster Co. LLC, designer and manufacturer of firearm accessory products including holsters and components. Rogers will continue to operate as a stand-alone company within Safariland's suite of brands.

Safariland has signed option agreements to acquire the remaining 35 percent of Rogers Holsters Co. from other company employees, and expects to exercise those options by the end of the year. Financial terms, which include the issuance of equity in Safariland's parent company, were not disclosed.

Rogers Holster Co. was founded in 1973 by Bill Rogers, a former FBI agent, police instructor and entrepreneur, who is also a world-ranked IPSC shooter and state trap champion with more than 40 years of shooting competition experience. He created the Kydex and security holsters, which are now widely used by police and military forces worldwide.

"The Safariland brand was originally created more than 50 years ago as a holster, belt and accessories provider, and through this addition we will gain in-house injection molding, design, tooling and other capabilities to continue providing our customers with the world-class products for which we are known. Bill is widely considered the leading designer and manufacturer in the holster and firearm accessory market," said Scott O'Brien, president of The Safariland Group.

"I am thrilled to take my long-time partnership with Safariland, the leader in the safety and survivability market, to the next level. I am confident we will benefit from Safariland's extensive distribution network and deep industry relationships, and Safariland is the right partner for our next phase of growth," Rogers said.

Rogers Holster Co. will remain headquartered in Jacksonville, Fla., under the leadership of Rogers and the current management team. In addition to his position as president of Rogers Holster Co., Rogers will also become a VP at Safariland.

Sellmark Develops "Talking Trail" For Local Community

With support from the City of Mansfield, Texas, Sellmark Corporation began development on its new "Talking Trail" in mid-October. It's being developed on city property behind Sellmark's headquarters.

"The talking trail has been in the works since 2011. It has been our vision to create a space for our employees and Mansfield residents to have the opportunity to get outside and enjoy nature," said Sellmark CEO Dianna Sellers. "The City of Mansfield has been extremely helpful throughout the development process and we're excited to get started."

Sellmark employees have volunteered their time to help develop and maintain over 40 acres into nature trails for the Mansfield community to enjoy. The company wanted to provide a natural and peaceful area for employees and Mansfield residents to stay active and walk, talk or cycle. The new talking trail supports Sellmark's mission to get more people outdoors.

"Sellmark and its employees are doing their share by taking a corner of their world and transforming into a beautiful green space," said David Cook, mayor of Mansfield. "Not only will their employees benefit from having this trail and open space available to them, but the community as a whole will benefit."

Sellmark employees remove trees and brush in what will be a 40-acre area of nature trails for the company's local community to enjoy.

Mansfield residents will not only use the trail but see it as a great example of corporate citizenship."

The City of Mansfield, the Mansfield Economic Development Corporation, as well as the Mansfield Parks and Recreation Department has provided support throughout the process. City staff is working with Sellmark to ensure the work is being done to city specifications and standards.

Honor Defense Partners With GoMeasure3D

New company Honor Defense has partnered with Amherst, Va.-based GoMeasure3D to integrate the use of 3D scanning in the development of its new line of pistols that launched in November.

Honor Defense collaborated with GoMeasure3D to implement the use of HDI 3D scanners for the design and production of its new line of concealed-carry handguns. The system uses structured light technology, which is helpful for designing small parts used in many industries, from assembly lines to machining centers.

"You can only build high-quality handguns if you have high-quality equipment and exacting standards," said Gary Ramey, Honor Defense president. "GoMeasure3D provides that technology for us. With a single scan, our equipment captures approximately 1 million data points per second, with an accuracy of 34 microns per scan."

Ramey says the 3D scanners also aid with quality control, ensuring everything matches specifications. "They've made our design processes faster and allowed us to raise the bar on quality," he added.

Benelli USA Match Raises $26,000 For Freedom Hunters

More than 150 shooters attended the first Benelli USA Invitational Shoot to support active duty and combat veterans. The sporting clays event raised $26,000 for Freedom Hunters — a record amount for the program to receive from a fundraising event. This amount was raised through entry fees and silent auction bids.

The match took place September 11, at Pintail Point in Queenstown, Md. Attendees included active duty military personnel, veterans, Freedom Hunters participants from Walter Reed National Military Center and others from the region.

"We're honored by the opportunity to support Freedom Hunters and give back what we can to those who give so much in service to our country," said Tom DeBolt, Benelli USA executive team general manager. "With the money raised, we know we'll be affecting a lot of veterans — and their families — in positive ways."

Freedom Hunters is a military outreach program; its mission is to convey the outdoor community's appreciation for the service the men and women of the armed forces provide. This is done through taking them and their families on outdoor adventures, including hunts and fishing trips.

"I cannot find the proper words to show our appreciation to Benelli USA for hosting such an incredible event," said Anthony Pace, Freedom Hunters founder. "The money raised will make an immediate and long-lasting impact on the lives of our servicemen and women. Benelli USA will forever be a member of the Freedom Hunters Family."

RGAS Raises $1.4 Million For Military Nonprofits

The 2015 Remington Great Americans Shoot (RGAS) raised $1.4 million, shattering last year's fundraising record by $250,000. The charity sporting clay shoot held in September at Providence Plantation in Rosharon, Texas, benefited the Special Forces Charitable Trust and other military nonprofits that provide support to active duty service members and veterans.

"I can't think of anything more rewarding for my family and me than RGAS. This country and the grace of God have blessed my family beyond reason, and giving back just shouldn't be this fun," said founder and shoot chair Mike Reynolds.

The RGAS is a one-of-a-kind format. Eighteen teams of five shooters raised a minimum of $50,000 each to participate. Half of the proceeds go to the Special Forces Charitable Trust, with the remainder split among designated charities of the top fundraising teams. Top individual fundraising honors went to Robert S. Bray Jr. M.D., who raised $267,000.

Each team included an honorary "Sixth Man" from within the special operations community. Among them was Army Maj. Ivan Castro, the only blind active duty officer in the Green Berets. Castro shot 15 out of 20 sporting clays, breaking his own world record of 13 set last year.

"Once again the Remington Great Americans Shoot was a tremendous success," said David T. Guernsey Jr., executive director of Special Forces Charitable Trust. "We had 118 participants this year, from New York to California, supporting the Special Forces Charitable Trust and special operations community. We thank every one of them for their support."

Winchester Safes Completes Production Expansion

Winchester Safes, operating since 1999, announces the grand opening of its automated production facility in Fort Worth, Texas.

At a cost of nearly $10 million, Winchester officials say the 67,081-square-foot expansion project was designed to bring back U.S.-manufactured products of superior quality. With state-of-the-art robotics and fiber lasers, the innovative production facility is optimizing its manufacturing process.

"This new fabrication equipment, in addition to the existing, fully automated powder-coating system, raises the gross potential output to over 600 safes per day. We are confident in the boost in production capabilities. We're also making a much more consistent and higher-quality safe for our customers right here in the U.S.," said Kyle Walters, owner and CEO of Winchester Safes.

Winchester safes vary from entry-level, 30-Minute Fire Rated safes through ultra-premium safes with Fire Ratings of 2.5 hours that include features like lighted interiors, power docking stations, sophisticated high-security locking systems and decorative hardware.

Training: What Can It Bring To Your Shop?

By Massad Ayoob

While most of the firearms training offered to law-abiding citizens comes from instructors who are strictly training providers, some retail gun shops have found sponsoring training provides a new stream of cash flow in the form of student tuition. However, training can also bring a different income stream to the sponsoring gun shop, even if the training is conducted off-premises. If your gun shop sponsors a training program, you may wonder what cash flow can you expect beyond tuition profit — the answer may be surprising.

If your store also has a shooting range, training is natural. It enhances overall store income in several ways. For example:

- A potential first-time gun owner is more likely to follow through and become one if he or she has the foundation of basic safety and marksmanship training. Once confidence is built, the new shooter is more likely to buy guns, ammo and accessories from what is now their “alma mater” than any other source. Moreover, when the new shooter graduates to solo practice sessions, that store’s range is a familiar place for them to come and take out their credit card to rent a lane and buy some ammo.

Filling seats in a training classroom can present a challenge, but if done correctly, it can lead to a profitable revenue stream for you.

- Training begets training: When the new shooter sees the light bulb come on, he or she will want to turn it up a little brighter. The shooter is then satisfied with the learning experience you provided, so it makes sense you are the first training provider they’ll look to when they’re ready for the next step.

Different Approaches For Generating Income From Training

Some gun shops don’t have on-site shooting ranges, but many dealers have proven this is no bar to hosting training — either lecture or live-fire.

The recently opened Thunderbird Firearms Academy in Wichita, Kan. — featured in this column last month — is doing brisk business. Despite its large retail area and inventory, training is the focus, which is done primarily by its skilled in-house staff on Thunderbird’s own state-of-the-art indoor ranges. The in-house training cadre often travels to other venues to do successful, profitable classes for Thunderbird.

Thunderbird occasionally brings in outside instructors, and according to Director of Training David Shaw, they make money on bringing them in.

“The big thing for us is institutional growth — for our staff as well as our customers learning from the guest instructors,” Shaw said. “We have a lot of guys new to defensive handguns who like to hear from an outside expert. Generally, the advice from the guest instructors sends students to the retail counter. For example, chest rigs and plate carriers used in rifle classes sell heavily in our retail section after the guest instructor gently reminds students the equipment they brought to the rifle class may not be ideal.”

The Pro Arms Gun Shop in Live Oak, Fla., doesn’t have a range, but receives profits from training with a two-pronged approach. Owner John Strayer does nine CCW classes a year, led by staff member Steve Denney, a retired SWAT officer. The shooting portion of the class is done on Strayer’s private range a few miles away from the shop, where classwork is accomplished in the spacious break room.

“We sell at least one gun per class — in addition to student tuition, of course,” Strayer said. “Typically, the buyer is either someone who came with an unreliable low-price pistol, and buys something better after the class, or someone who bought an Airweight .38 for its size and found out it’s difficult and uncomfortable to shoot well, so they buy something like a GLOCK 19 or a compact Springfield XD or S&W SHIELD. We also sell a lot of ammo to CCW students, particularly from the CCW applicants who rent guns from us because they haven’t bought a handgun of their own yet. Once you get them in, you’ve got a returning customer!”

Pro Arms’ second strategy to earn money from training is a working alliance with another training provider in the community.

“Sales here in town brings in a ‘name’ instructor about three times a year,” Strayer explains. “My staff and I have been to those classes and we know what the visiting instructor staff recommends for guns and gear. We make a point of stocking the best stuff: books by the ‘real deal’ experts, street-proven ammo like 135-grain +P Gold Dot NYPD loads for .38 snubs and the 124-grain +P Gold Dot 9mm, holsters by Blade-Tech and DeSantis, a full selection of GLOCKs, XDs, M&Ps and high-end 1911s, etc.

“We stay open an extra hour at the end of one day of class, and all the students come over for a ‘field trip.’ It always goes well into a four-figure gross for that hour or so, mostly a windfall from out-of-town students who normally wouldn’t have known our shop existed.”

How To Get Started

If you don't currently know quality instructors in your community, the NRA can hook you up with some. You may even have very capable gun teachers on your staff already. If you're teaching an NRA program or a state-mandated CCW course, make sure the instructors take no shortcuts and deliver the entire curriculum to students. A sub-par course can mar your shop's reputation, and even result in the revocation of concealed carry permits issued through the training you sponsored. It's always a good idea for you or someone you trust to take the course elsewhere before bringing the instructor in — just to make sure it's something you'd want to be associated with.

For targeted advertising, send a press release to the editor or outdoor sports columnist of your local newspaper. Consider buying an ad in local "shopper's papers," which many gun dealers have told me is strong for promotion. If you have a state-level gun owners' online forum, it probably has a section where you can advertise your classes for little to no expense. If you're bringing in a "big name" instructor, major national gun forums like thehighroad.org, thefiringline.com, glocktalk.com, etc., have sections where you can place announcements. These tend to bring in serious students from multi-state areas, or even from all over the country.

Keep in mind, providing training has worked for other gun shop owners — even if they don't have their own ranges. There's no reason it can't work for you. ☺

Once a first-time gun owner receives proper training from you, he or she will be more likely to frequent your range since trust has already been established.

Editor's Note: Next month, Massad Ayoob will look at the subtleties of hosting a training class at your store.

You're Only As Good As Your Reputation

By Taylor Smithfield

Large corporations invest significant resources to protect and promote their image. They gain a lot of attention for their business practices because they're so exposed, so it's incredibly easy to fall out of the public eye with one bad decision in production or policy. We often read today's headlines about the latest corporate litigation scandal like it's already old news. It's true: You're only as good as your reputation.

While massive entities will inevitably carry large targets on their backs, the rise of social media is moving small businesses into the spotlight — now more than ever. This doesn't have to be a scary thing, however. In fact, it's a great opportunity for you to solidify your reputation in the community. There are various ways to do this, but one of the most effective is to address your social concern for the way you conduct your business with a Corporate Social Responsibility report (CSR).

Because Corporate Social Responsibility can sound "white collar" or maybe "liberal," it's not something many small business gun dealers think they can or should attempt. Big corporations rely on good press to keep both stakeholders and the media happy by making positive strides to reduce waste or improve safety. However, CSR can be great PR for you, too, because it's entirely voluntary, which shows the public it's your own personal agenda to address social and environmental concerns in your business operations.

While the idea of spending your resources on CSR might be daunting, you might actually be addressing social concerns without even realizing it. The key to CSR is to reduce, eliminate, or improve areas that your business impacts. You might already be doing this by promoting firearms safety with children, sponsoring a shooting event, recycling waste, reducing energy or encouraging employees to volunteer.

Vista Outdoor's Corporate Social Responsibility Report

Vista Outdoor ("a global designer, manufacturer and marketer in the growing outdoor sports and recreation markets") created their 2015 Corporate Social Responsibility Report, which is a great blueprint for crafting your own CSR report. The report opens with a full-color photo and message from their CEO, Mark DeYoung, who puts a friendly face to their business. The report is broken into sections covering their values, safety, ethics, environment, community and employees.

The safety section is arguably one of the most important, since gun safety is likely in the forefront of both your current and future customers' minds. Vista Outdoor highlights its sponsorships and affiliated brand sponsorships such as the NSSF's Project ChildSafe, NRA, Boy Scouts of America, 4-H programs, IHEA-USA and SAAMI, which aim to promote firearms safety.

Vista Outdoor's Code of Ethics, which is published on their website, is their "commonsense guide to help Vista Outdoor employees make ethical business decisions, raise awareness of legal and ethical issues, and understand the process in place for dealing with those issues." They invest in employee ethics training and offer channels for reporting violations in their code. Establishing and sharing how your team conducts business is a great way to be transparent, which will certainly attract customers.

By creating a Corporate Social Responsibility Report, Vista Outdoor is easily able to convey the company's commitment to safety, ethics, environmental stewardship, community engagement and the well-being of its employees.

"Keeping the outside world thriving" sums up Vista Outdoor's commitment to environmental stewardship. Their efforts have raised $670,000 for conservation organizations and $82 million in excise taxes for the Wildlife Restoration Fund. They also offer royalty programs on Federal Premium's new 3rd Degree turkey loads and all Premium Mag-Shok loads. Portions of their Federal Premium sales go to the support of the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and Safari Club International. While your store probably can't match their corporate giving scheme, you can make a big difference in your own neighborhood by partnering with conservation groups.

Lastly, Vista Outdoor addresses their employees and workplace. "People are our most important asset and our greatest competitive advantage," they say. "Our culture centers on an engaged and accountable workforce — where leaders and employees are responsible for developing talent. We desire to attract and retain the very best, diverse workforce: rich in talent, background, ideas and experience." With an array of health and wellness incentives, employee recognition and educational scholarships, they are both attracting the right workforce and sending them into the community as better people.

ARMS & THE WOMAN

Versatile Concealed-Carry Options For Women

By Lisa Parsons-Wraith

Women's CCW accessories have come a long way in the past few years. Recognizing the rise in women interested in self-defense, manufacturers have responded by offering more concealment products designed by women, for women. The options have evolved to incorporate more than just firearms — they now take into account a woman's need for technology. There are many exciting CCW options, so let's take a look at a few promising products.

Galco has always been a strong supporter of women in the shooting sports. Technology lovers will want the iDefense carry system, which is designed to protect a tablet as well as conceal a handgun. The iDefense safely secures a medium- or large-framed firearm and spare ammo with an elasticized nylon holster hidden within a lockable zipped compartment. A sturdy backing plate anchors the tablet, and it's fully adjustable for tablet angle. The iDefense accommodates tablets up to 10 inches long, 7.5 inches wide and 3/8 inches thick. The iDefense measures 10x8x2.5 inches.

Another versatile product from Galco is the CarrySafe Gen 2. This holster, designed to turn any type of bag into a CCW holster, has an elasticized nylon holster — which attaches securely with Velcro to a stiff leather backing plate. An adjustable metal clip on the backing plate allows for customized ride height of the holster to accommodate different bags and draws. A reinforced thumb break retention strap secures the gun. This system is designed to work with all types of handguns. The included CarrySafe Accessory Carrier can be quickly and easily adjusted to fit a spare magazine, speed loader, speed strip, flashlight, pepper spray, and many other accessories. The CarrySafe is available for right hand draw in black.

Warm Up And Cool Down Options

Outerwear can be a part of women's concealed carry plan as well. The SeV Annie Jacket from SCOTTeVEST sports 35 pockets, including a Rapid Access Pocket for a firearm and more. The jacket is designed to be both practical and fashionable without giving away its many features. A water-repellant black soft shell fabric allows for quiet movement and also conceals features like sleeve dagger pockets — for knives, flashlights or even pepper spray. Other features include a clear cellphone pocket, a tablet pocket and an RFID-blocking pocket to protect wallets and a passport.

Rivers West also offers CCW outerwear with the Women's Full Metal Jacket. Designed specifically for fit and flatter women, two interior zipper pockets allow for crossdraw — while two exterior pockets are designed for strong-side draw. The Full Metal Jacket comes with one left- and one right-handed holster for a full-size handgun and even an extra magazine. A built-in shoulder harness helps distribute the weight of the gun and prevents snagging. A macro fleece exterior and waterproof/breathable membrane add to the wearer's comfort. The Full Metal Jacket is available in black, olive or burgundy.

Warm weather CCW clothing options are also readily available to women.

UnderTech Undercover has tank tops and concealment shorts for women. These are compression-style garments worn under clothing and are made of fabrics designed to cool. The tank top features holsters on both sides of the body, making it ambidextrous and able to carry extra items like handcuffs or a spare magazine. A retention strap holds the firearm in place. The tank top comes in black, white or nude. The shorts can be worn under almost anything. It features two pockets for firearms and comes in black or white. Both garments are machine washable.

The Packin' Tee from Ridge Outdoors offers women another concealment T-shirt possibility. The Packin' Tee is universal for use and accommodates both small and large handguns. The Packin' Tee uses a heavy-duty industrial strength hook and loop fastening system for side attachment pads. The heavy duty hook and loop attachment pads on both sides offer the ability to use one side for the gun holster and the other side for accessories such as a wallet/cell phone pouch or magazine pouch. Made of 100 percent preshrunk cotton, and sporting an extended length, the Packin' Tee is available in white only.

A final T-shirt offering comes from 5.11 Tactical called appropriately, the Sleeveless Holster Shirt. Designed specifically for women, the Sleeveless Holster Shirt distributes weight evenly across the shoulders and an outer mesh layer prevents printing. The holster components are two integrated pockets accessed through the front of the shirt that give a woman the choice of draw. An inner neoprene layer cushions the firearm, while a terry cloth layer wicks away moisture. This shirt is available in black or white and made from a comfortable, formfitting polyester/spandex blend.

Lethal Lace

A unique CCW choice for women is the Lethal Lace holster. It's a 7-inch wide by 96-inch long piece of heavy-duty elasticized lace — sporting two pockets measuring 4.5 inches and 3.5 inches wide. These two pockets are further divided into two equal pockets for a total of four pockets. One removable neoprene insert is provided for extra comfort and cushioning. The multiple pockets are designed to conceal just about anything from a firearm or a knife, to pepper spray or a cell phone.

The Lethal Lace holster is highly versatile and can be wrapped around the body for carry on the ankle, leg, waist or chest. Strong suspender grips secure the holster in place and can be positioned in different ways for additional support and safety. Available in pink, teal, nude or black lace, this holster is one size fits all. It's one of those products that takes some explanation and demonstration, but will result in satisfied women customers.

Lethal Lace is a one size fits all holster, available in a variety of colors and can be worn on the ankle, leg, waist or chest.

Stock To Your Customers' Needs

The qualities of some of these products are difficult to see at first glance simply because they're designed for concealment. A great way to introduce these products to women customers is to hold a special ladies night where women can model and try the products so they know exactly how they work and understand their many features. Tailor the items you stock to your customers' needs and introduce them to a few items they didn't know they needed yet. It will make for a fun, social night and will prompt sales. ☺

NEW BUSINESS YEAR

INDUSTRY CONQUERS 2015, PREPARES FOR 2016 CHALLENGES

Laying the groundwork for the 2016 New Business Year presents a host of challenges for the industry. Not that the industry hasn't faced and overcome numerous trials. Most recently, the industry has battled through the "new normal," white-hot to chilly sales, excessive inventory, ammunition shortages, "race-to-the-bottom" pricing and dumping (with inherent compressed margins) and encouraging/not-so-encouraging rollercoaster sales.

Next up: Aggressive campaigns for gun control. Yes, 2016 will have its own, unique set of challenges, many of them driven by those seeking to become the next president.

Also setting the tone for 2016 business is the good and not so good of 2015.

CONSUMERS BEGAN BUYING

The 2015 New Business Year began in promising fashion. The start was refreshing, given a brutal 2014. During the first nine months of 2014, the industry experienced significant decreases in sales. Gradually, beginning in October 2014, sales increased and in December 2014 NICS conducted the highest number of background checks for a single month since January 2013.

While many attribute the uptick in sales during the latter part of 2014 to drastic discounts to clear an overburdened distribution pipeline (with little profit), it nevertheless created optimism for 2015. It was short-lived.

By March 2015, sales softened and nearly stalled. Manufacturers quietly laid off hundreds of employees, reduced production and curtailed expansion plans. Dealers reported a scarcity of customers. It wasn't pretty.

Then on the way to an all-out industry crash, consumers began buying again. In June, NICS conducted the highest number of background checks for that month in the history of the system. The 886,825 (NSSF-adjusted) background checks were a 10 percent increase over 2014, and even bested the 2013 "Golden Year" by 1.7 percent. It surprised many.

"We had a roughly 10 percent increase in June; it was kind of shocking to see," said Justin Hardy, manager of Rock House Pawn in Meridian, Miss.

The increases continued. In July, NICS conducted 946,528 (NSSF-adjusted) background checks, another historic-high for a month, and a 15.9 percent increase (NSSF-adjusted) over July 2014.

"It was interesting to see the acceleration of NICS checks in July over June. That is unusual when you look at history. [That] doesn't normally happen till August," said James Debney, Smith & Wesson Holding Corp. president, CEO.

In August, September and October, the number of background checks increased 4.3 percent (1,031,959), 4.7 percent (1,071,945) and 3.1 percent (1,211,478), respectively.

The return to increased sales was a major morale booster for manufacturers, distributors, importers and dealers as they began the 2015 peak-buying season.

RETURN TO INCREASED SALES

Ruger punctuated its confidence in the future with the announcement of its 2 Million Gun Challenge.

"We're bringing back the 1 Million Gun Challenge with a twist," said Mike Fifer, Ruger CEO. "Our goal is to sell two million firearms between the 2015 and 2016 NRA Annual Meetings."

Ruger will donate $2 to the NRA for every new firearm sold between the two meetings.

"We accomplished our goals to support the NRA in 2012, and with the help of our loyal customers, we believe we can do it again," Fifer said.

Driving that confidence was a return to increased sales. Ruger reported overall sales of $140.9 million for its second quarter, which ended June 27. While this is an 8.3 percent decrease compared to the same quarter in 2014, it was a 15 percent increase over the fourth quarter, which ended Dec. 31, 2014 — a notable improvement in six months.

In November, Ruger reported continued increases in sales.

"In the third quarter of 2015, net sales increased 23 percent and earnings increased 76 percent from the third quarter of 2014," Fifer said.

Third quarter sales were $120.9 million compared to $98.7 million for the same 2014 quarter. The company's estimated sell-through of products from distributors to retailers increased 28 percent during the quarter.

Smith & Wesson, after reporting decreased sales early in 2015, regained solid footing by midyear. Early in 2015, the company reported its overall sales for its third quarter, which ended January 31, were down 10.5 percent, compared to the 2014 third quarter. In August, S&W reported its sales for the first quarter 2016, which ended July 31, had increased 12.1 percent, compared to the same quarter in 2014.

This translates to a six-month, 13 percent increase in overall sales from the end of January until the end of July, with an 8 percent increase in firearms sales.

In addition to an increase in firearms sold, which include the Thompson/Center line, S&W officials cite "excellent results" in the company's accessory division. The division posted $13.3 million in sales during the first quarter 2016.

"Based upon our performance for the first quarter and our current outlook for the remainder of fiscal 2016, we are raising our full-year revenue and net income guidance," Debney said.

During an Aug. 27 earnings conference call, Debney said the company's most important focus was on product development.

"We currently have more than 120 new products and line extensions in development; many of which will be unveiled at SHOT Show this coming January," he said.

Remington, after numerous negative quarters, reported $88.2 million in firearm sales during its 2015 second quarter, which ended June 28. The 8.4 percent increase, compared to the second quarter 2014, was built on increases in MSR and centerfire rifles. The company reported decreased sales in shotguns, handguns and rimfire rifles.

In ammunition, Remington reported second quarter sales of $93.5 million, a decrease of 10.9 percent, compared to the corresponding months in 2014. Rimfire ammunition posted an increase of $4.7 million.

Vista Outdoor reported its sales for its first full quarter of fiscal year 2016, which ended July 5, were down 9 percent, compared to the same quarter last year.

"While the revenue for the recent quarter is as expected, lower than the same period a year ago due to the shooting sports market correction, we delivered strong, sequential quarter-over-quarter growth. In addition, we see several indicators that support our expectations for low, single-digit organic growth for the full fiscal year," said Mark DeYoung, Vista Outdoor chairman and CEO.

During the quarter, Vista Outdoor acquired CamelBak, known for its personal hydration systems, and Jimmy Styks, a major player in the paddleboard market.

Olin Corp. reports Winchester Ammunition sales for the second quarter 2015 were $194.2 million, a 7.29 percent increase over the second quarter 2014.

"In the Winchester business, third quarter 2015 earnings are expected to be comparable to third quarter 2014 levels ($209.6 million)," said Joseph D. Rupp, Olin chairman and CEO.

BEYOND THE LEDGER

Experts attribute the improvement in this year's consumer spending to numerous factors: throughout-the-year new product introductions, significant increases in consumer promotions/rebates and enhanced dealer programs (with major deals and discounts). These are key elements, of course.

But perhaps the major element driving sales is the increasing unrest in the country and the corresponding concern for personal safety.

City riots, anti-police rhetoric and shootings, tragic church and school shootings, killing of U.S. military personnel on our own soil, live TV execution-style shootings — the killing and maiming has stunned all of us.

THE RETURN TO INCREASED SALES WAS A MAJOR MORALE BOOSTER FOR MANUFACTURERS, DISTRIBUTORS, IMPORTERS AND DEALERS.

And consumers are responding, accordingly. And, that will continue to motivate sales into 2016.

"Most of our firearm sales have been in handguns for the CHL (Concealed Handgun License) course. Customers are concerned about safety. People don't know what to expect today," said Mary Wiley owner of Wiley Guns in Willis Point, Texas.

The anti-gun movement has regained significant footing this year; it's been energized. Yes, such anti-gun campaigns and rhetoric drives sales. That's the positive. The negative is the increased anti-gun/anti-industry legislation. And the time and energy required to fight the battles.

How the industry handles all this will determine just how successful it can rate 2016 — beyond the ledger. ☀

Dealers Forecast 2016

ONLINE RETAILERS, ELECTION YEAR LOOM LARGE

By Jade Moldé

Over the last couple years, dealers have grown increasingly cautious of the shifting trends in the industry — balancing between reacting to the market and anticipating what will increase sales at their store. The 2016 New Business Year is just weeks away and several dealers provided insight on the challenges they're facing today and how they plan on successfully navigating 2016.

The "New Normal" developed as a popular catchphrase in 2014 — used to describe the industry's experience with a significant decrease in demand after several consecutive years of record sales — and dealers are continuing to adjust to today's corrected marketplace.

"The biggest challenge facing firearm retailers is adjusting to the 'new normal,'" said David Wilson, founder and owner of Lebanon Gun Shop in Lebanon, Tenn. "I describe the 'new normal' as smaller incremental increases in annual sales. I think too many stores became accustomed to the sales spikes of 2008 and 2012 and a lot of new players entered the business seeing an opportunity to make a 'quick buck.' As a result, there has been a lot of inventory dumping as the 'quick buck' guys are getting out of the business and many established shops are discounting out overstocked items, e.g. MSRs."

A surge of new customers has fueled the industry's recent growth, but it also provided its own set of challenges because many of the new customers come from a "non-traditional" background — they're younger, urban and female. At Shoot Smart, a range and retail establishment with two locations near the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Strategic Operations Manager Jared Sloane says his biggest challenge is searching for new products to provide an "entertainment experience" to these new customers.

"In the retail segment of our business, the biggest challenge we face is product selection for a new audience. We're looking for new items that appeal to a broad, diverse audience, with little to no experience, and more interest in having an entertainment experience rather than a skills or self-defense experience," he said.

With fluctuating demand, dealers are cautious of how much product they'll buy — which wasn't often the case during the peak years of 2013 and early 2014.

"We can't overbuy or overstock, we're very cautious of how much inventory we put out," said Mike Walsh, the owner of a store in Michigan.

In reaction to 2015's strong year-end NICS numbers, retailers pointed out this could be from the continued "race-to-the-bottom" pricing trend.

"If our area is any indication, it's because most independent retailers are dumping inventory at fire sale prices to stay alive. We see this at gun shows and in store sales locally," observed Jim Arias of Arias Artifacts Inc. in Panama City Beach, Fla.

"The recent uptick in NICS numbers is due to the inventory dumping, which is mostly happening via Internet sales on auction sites and online retailers. The dumping will continue until the inventory at the retail level gets back in line with consumer demand," Wilson said.

Online Retailer Threat

A number of dealers have identified online retailers as the greatest challenge to the longevity of their business. Dealers expressed they'd be able to compete with online retailers and provide important mentorship for new customers if price points were on a level playing field.

"Online sales affect my business big time. The number one issue is there's no sales tax for online sales unless they're in the same state," said Tom Denniston of Fort Thompson Shooting Goods in Sherwood, Ariz. "This allows customers to come check the product out at their local gun shop and then order online. It wouldn't be an issue with me if they would charge sales tax because it would put everybody on the same playing field. Somebody needs to wake up!"

David Wilson, Lebanon Gun Shop owner, attributes a lot of the recent inventory dumping to "quick buck" dealers and stores with overstocked items left in inventory, such as MSRs.

"The sales tax issue is a no brainer," said Tom Mincher, owner of American Hunter Gun & Archery Shop in Covington, La. "It should be up to who can help the customer the most, has the most knowledge and is willing to spend the time with the customer so they're actually effective with what they purchase. Get everyone on a playing field, and see who's who."

Jim Arias has been selling firearms for 20 years and when asked to describe his store's biggest challenge, he simply said: "staying in business."

"Profit margins are at an all-time low and the public is not buying at any price," he noted. "Online sales continue to erode retail prices — making it unwise for us to order heavy for the coming quarter."

A surge of new customers has fueled the industry's recent growth, but it also provided its own set of challenges.

Dealers conclude brick-and-mortar retailers will continue to be negatively impacted by online stores unless more manufacturers introduce and enforce a minimum advertised pricing (MAP) program.

"If more manufacturers don't start instituting MAP, the brick-and-mortar establishments will continue to see declines in sales," he said. "This will result in more businesses deciding it's time to bail out. So, there will be more inventory dumping — which contributes to the further decline in profit for those remaining dealers."

"I don't have a problem with e-tailers — they're just doing business," said Harold Parks of Sunrise Pass Arms Co. in Minden, Nev. "The problem lies with manufacturers who sell to them at distributor prices without a no-retail stipulation. I can compete with the no sales tax problem, but not when they're selling at wholesale prices."

To combat online retailers, many dealers have opened up an online store to complement sales in their brick-and-mortar location — a trend that appears to be gathering momentum.

"E-tailers are impacting our sales, but we've added an online store and we've seen a lot of sales online since," Walsh said.

"A majority of online firearm offerings now seem to be from stores with a physical location, and some are very large operations with aggressive pricing. More and more stores are using the Internet for at least some additional sales," observed H. Taylor Buckner of Hero's Arms in South Hero, Vt. "Main-street retailers would be better off establishing their own online presence, finding an under-served niche, or specializing in unique items rather than attempting to cripple their competitors."

2016 Presidential Election Impact?

In the presidential election cycles of 2008 and 2012, the industry experienced a noticeable increase in sales. Some dealers are expecting additional sales in 2016, although not at the levels of previous elections.

"If Hillary is nominated we expect a small uptick in MSR sales, but not to the level we saw when Obama was elected," Arias predicted. "There may be a pick-up in October/November as the outcome of the election becomes clear but we do not anticipate the panic buying occurring again."

"Based on previous election cycles, it's likely we'll see an increase in ammunition and firearm sales throughout the year with a very strong fourth quarter. In addition, we anticipate a growth in new range customers as a result of general intrigue because our industry remains in the media spotlight," Sloane said.

Other dealers predict the 2016 presidential election will have a negligible impact on their year-end bottom line.

"I don't see the 2016 election having much of an impact, unless another progressive liberal-type candidate appears to be headed to the Oval Office," Wilson said.

"I'm pretty sure if Hillary gets elected and they continue to express anti-gun views, then sales may go up. But as we've seen in the past, customers will stop buying after a certain point — so I don't see this helping my gun sales," Mincher observed.

Strategy For Success

Dealers planning for a successful 2016 Business Year say they will pursue new demographics, while continuing to build on their core group of customers.

"We're reaching out to new markets, hoping to build support for our sport and our business in entertainment categories. At the same time, we're already working on adding value for our traditional customers through new services, such as a full-service gunsmith facility," Sloane said. "In addition, we're working to find value added through other services, reduce our dependence on firearm sales (which is already fairly low) and convert transfer-driven traffic into accessory, training or membership sales."

Wilson predicts his store's successful Customer Relation Management program will continue to be a driving force for business in 2016.

Dealers planning for a successful 2016
Business Year say they will pursue new demographics.

"We do two things to differentiate our store from others. One: We provide a lifetime warranty on all the new guns we stock. The second thing we do is we offer a 30-day 'No Regrets' policy. The details on these programs are provided on our website. This creates a strong customer retention rate and the word of mouth advertisement generated by these programs is impressive," he said.

Some dealers looking to boost sales in 2016 have pinpointed the importance of involvement with their communities to reach new demographics.

"In 2015, we averaged more than one event per month per store," Sloane said. "Next year we'll have an emphasis on engaging minority communities through a specific outreach campaign. And we're looking for ways to get more involved with Project ChildSafe to support both the local community and NSSF program nationally."

"We're going to continue our involvement with hunter education. When a child turns 16, they have to have a hunter education class. We stay involved with that kind of stuff. We also donate to Ducks Unlimited and the National Wild Turkey Federation. I'll sell them guns at cost and do all the transfers — I won't charge them anything to promote the industry we're in," Mincher said. ☑

2016 SHOT SHOW

OVER 1,600 EXHIBITORS UNDER ONE ROOF PROVIDES BUSINESS-BUILDING FORUM

BY CAROLEE ANITA BOYLES

As 2015 quickly comes to a close and the New Business Year approaches, NSSF representatives say the 2016 SHOT Show — which runs for four days from January 19–22 at the Sands Expo and Convention Center in Las Vegas — will once again be a show that's "Too Good To Miss."

"The SHOT Show gets better every year because we're focused on continuously improving the experience," said Steve Sanetti, president and CEO of NSSF. "As a result, for 30 years running, the SHOT Show has proven it's the single best way for retailers and range operators to network and learn. They can attend educational seminars to keep them on top of all the trends affecting their businesses. And there's the driving dynamic of having more than 1,600 exhibitors under one roof showcasing the newest and best-selling products in firearms, ammunition and the vast array of shooting and hunting accessories."

The floor plan of the 2016 show will be slightly different from the 2015 show, allowing a few more core companies to get some exposure.

"We've moved some things around for 2016," said Chris Dolnack, Senior Vice President and CMO of NSSF. "We're going to move the non-profit booths from Level 3 outside the Press Room down to G Hall where they'll get more traffic. We'd like to move as many as 50 exhibitors off the wait list to the area right outside the Press Room. Instead of those exhibitors having 10x10 spaces, they'd have 5x10 spaces so they can get some exposure, particularly with the Press Room being right there. Then those exhibitors would be the first new exhibitors onto the main show floor next year."

Although this plan was still tentative in mid-October, Dolnack said if it works, it will give those exhibitors a chance for exposure to SHOT Show attendees while they're waiting to get in as regular exhibitors.

"Typically we get about 100 new exhibitors into the show each year, and a lot of those companies would like to have a 10x20," he noted. "As of the middle of October, we're only going to get 40 to 50 new exhibitors in — so we'd like to create more opportunity to allow attendees to see it as 'Coming to a SHOT Show soon!' for those exhibitors. We'd particularly like to have innovators in this area."

Dolnack said NSSF is continuing to refine exhibitors so the SHOT Show speaks to the core of the industry.

"Our first priority is the Tier 1 companies," he said. "Tier 1 companies are those who sell firearms and ammunition. Tier 2 companies are those who carry anything that goes in, on or around the gun."

INTERNATIONAL SALES EFFORT

For the first time at the 2015 SHOT Show, attending exhibitors were able to participate in the U.S. Department of Commerce's (DOC) International Buyer Program.

"We were accepted again for this program for 2016, and we've been increasing our marketing internationally," Dolnack said. "We attend the IWA OutdoorClassics Show, where we have a booth promoting SHOT Show and Las Vegas. We don't do this so much to gain exhibitors — because we already have a wait list — we do it to attract the interest of international buyers. Last year, we had delegations from 22 different countries, which were brought in by the DOC. We expect to have even more participation in January. We're continually trying to grow our international attendance, and we're going to try to get some Euros coming in and some U.S. products going out."

This program provides the SHOT Show with support from the DOC to manage and facilitate the pairing of international buyers with exhibiting U.S. companies. The DOC works with U.S. exhibitors to educate them on existing government export programs. In addition, this program offers DOC assistance on a variety of issues to assist show exhibitors, including providing export counsel, assistance with intellectual property infringement (IPR), education on Strategy Targeting Organized Piracy (STOP) program, IPR protection measures during the show and the means to protect intellectual property in overseas markets.

Exhibitors can sign up and register for the service, and their company profile will be shared with pre-screened international buyers. Companies will also receive an invitation to a networking reception on Tuesday at the International Trade Center, allowing them to attend and mingle with potential buyers.

“During the Showtime program, exhibitors can meet with commercial specialists from embassies and consulates who lead the delegations,” Dolnack said. “Exhibitors can receive country-specific market information and talk about the potential of exporting their products to various countries.”

Dolnack also said there will be overseas market briefings Wednesday through Friday.

“There will be a room adjacent to the International Business Center on Level 2, where exhibitors will be able to sign up if they’re interested in a particular country,” he added. More information about this program is available at www.shotshow.org/exhibitors/ibp-exhibitor-services.

MAPPING YOUR SHOW ROUTE

The NSSF staff members have continued to ramp up their efforts to help attendees navigate the show.

“We’ve continued to make improvements to the SHOT Show Planner, but there’s only so much we can do in terms of the biggest complaint we get, which is the numbers on the floor plan are too small,” Dolnack said. “However, it’s also available via GoExpo, which is the tablet version.”

Dolnack said the app is provided by Core-apps, one of the leading native app builders in the event business.

“We’ll still have all the bells and whistles from last year,” he added. “In fact, our adoption rate on our app last year was higher than it was for the Consumer Electronics Show, if you can believe that. It just goes to show you our customers really are interested in technology. There’s a technical aspect to being a firearms enthusiast, and back where there were floppy disks, guys were using computers to calculate ballistics and trajectory. I think there’s a natural curiosity about technology in our industry.”

“SHOT SHOW HAS PROVEN IT’S THE SINGLE BEST WAY FOR RETAILERS AND RANGE OPERATORS TO NETWORK AND LEARN.”

— STEVE SANETTI, PRESIDENT AND CEO, NSSF

One thing new for 2016 is on the Exhibitor Dashboard and in the Marketing Toolkit.

“Exhibitors have to access the Dashboard using their booth number and password. We’ve added some new features, like how to promote your participation in advance,” Dolnack noted. “Traci Browne, author of The Social Trade Show, is writing some guest blogs and we’ve also provided some social media templates if a company wants to use TweetDeck or Hootsuite to line up some tweets in advance. We give them examples like ‘Come by and see us in booth 123 at the 2016 SHOT Show,’ and tweets to use during the show, just to remind people you’re there and to generate traffic for your booth.”

With its miles of aisles, the 38th Annual SHOT Show will provide dealers with numerous opportunities to handle new products, meet with exhibitors and network with other industry professionals. The SHOT Show attracts buyers from all 50 states and more than 100 countries.

Partnering with the U.S. Department of Commerce, the SHOT Show provides business-to-business matchmaking with U.S. exhibitors and international buyers. At the 2015 show, more than 420 international buyers from 28 countries participated in the International Buyer Program to maximize import/export potential with U.S.-based manufacturers. Attendees can stay connected with show events through the SHOT Show website and app.

STATE OF THE INDUSTRY RECEPTION

Attendees fortunate enough to hold a ticket to the 2016 SHOT Show's State of the Industry Dinner on Tuesday, January 19 will be treated to a performance by comedian Jeff Foxworthy. The dinner will be held in the Venetian Resort Hotel Casino, Level 5, in the Palazzo Ballroom. Seats are limited and ticket pre-purchase is required. Tickets are $125 each for members and $145 each for non-members. Tables for 10 are $1,150 for members and $1,350 for non-members. Seat assignments are by date and time of payment. More information is available at www.shotshow.org/events/state-of-the-industry-dinner.

An avid outdoorsman, Jeff Foxworthy is one of the most respected and successful comedians in the country. He has excelled as a comic, author and TV personality for 25 years. He's also the largest selling comedy-recording artist in history, a multiple Grammy Award nominee and best-selling author of more than 26 books.

Tickets went on sale to voting and supporting members in August, and the remaining tickets became available in late September to everyone else. Dolnack said they generally sell out by mid-December.

To purchase tickets, log into your Exhibitor or Attendee Dashboard on the SHOT Show website at www.shotshow.org or contact Customer Services at (855) 355-4768.

SHOT SHOW EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES

Attendees always have plenty of educational possibilities at the SHOT Show, and 2016 will be no exception. First is SHOT Show University, which will be held on Monday, January 18, in the Venetian. The cost for the SHOT Show U is $250 for NSSF members and $500 for non-members. If you're a Premium NSSF member, however, you can receive one complimentary SHOT Show University pass. To find out more about Premium Retailer Membership, visit www.nssf.org/ retailers.

The 2016 SHOT Show University will be even bigger than it was in 2015.

"We've expanded SHOT Show U to 350 people," Dolnack said. "One of the benefits of these sessions is not only what retailers learn from the speakers, but the topics spark conversations amongst retailers. They often can learn something from a fellow retailer even if it's not covered or proven to work."

One track will be on ATF regulations and compliance. Additional tracks focus on information for new retailers, range development, marketing and other issues veteran retailers face. The veteran retailer track is for the retailer who has been in business a long time, and will feature courses like publicizing your firearms business, healthcare reform issues and legal aspects of e-commerce.

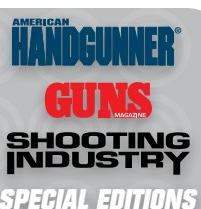

The Retailer Seminar Program is also larger for 2016. Retailer Seminars held during the SHOT Show provide dealers with opportunities to learn more about how to grow their businesses and stay current with industry trends and issues. Dolnack said the 2016 show will offer 18 retailer seminars.

"We have some pretty dynamic topics lined up," he said. "The seminars are $25 each and we have room for 150 retailers in each one. Last year we had 12, and all of them sold out at 150 people. Retailers can reserve their seats ahead of time and purchase tickets when they register."

Besides SHOT Show University and the Retailer Seminars, there will also be classes for working L.E. officers. The Law Enforcement Education Program will be presented by NSSF, Police Magazine and the National Tactical Officers Association — where national experts present class sessions everyday.

"The program is free for L.E. officers, but they should register ahead of time," Dolnack noted. "One reason we hold this program is because it's often difficult for law enforcement to get approval to go to Las Vegas for a trade show. If there's a training component attached to it — especially one that has received recognition — it's easier for an officer to get authorization to go to the SHOT Show. In this way, we're helping to ensure we have adequate attendance for our law enforcement and tactical exhibitors."

For more information about SHOT Show University, Retailer Seminars and the Law Enforcement Education Program, visit www.shotshow.org/education-programs.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MEDIA COVERAGE

Exhibitors have several ways to interact with the working press in the press room. They can put press kits there, or access the press conference room, where they can meet with selected media or schedule a press conference. If an exhibitor isn't utilizing the press room properly, he or she is missing an opportunity, according to Dolnack.

"Exhibitors are able to reserve a bin in the press room, where they can put materials for the press to pick up. They can access the press room if they want to meet with the media. We have a press conference room and they can sign up to hold a press conference to make an announcement. We'll have more information in the exhibitor Marketing Toolkit on how to work with the media and get publicity for their participation," he said.

A note to exhibitors: Don't just put out a few press kits and expect them to still be there the next day. Have someone from your company monitor the number of press kits remaining daily. If you only put out 25, they'll be gone in a matter of minutes.

Be sure to utilize technology. Members of the press are much more likely to pick up information on flash drives or CDs than they are to pick up big folders of heavy paper, no matter how pretty the catalogs are. Exhibitors can sign up for press bins online. The link to do so is on the show website in the Exhibitor Resource Center at www.shotshow.org/erc.

FINAL DETAILS

Although there are plenty of other shows during the year, none of them takes the place of the SHOT Show — which kicks off the New Business Year and showcases everything available within the trade. It's also a networking show, an educational show and a media show to spread the word across the industry.

"That's why the SHOT Show is a must-attend event every year," Sanetti said. "It's energizing for our entire industry. And because the attendees are retailers who are on the front lines with consumers, there's no better way to start 2016 than by attending the show and returning to your store or range with all the new information and renewed energy."

To stay up-to-date on last-minute Show announcements, visit www.shotshow.org.

Comedian Jeff Foxworthy will be returning to the 2016 SHOT Show's State of the Industry Dinner as the headline entertainment.

THE YOUTH MOVEMENT

ENGAGE WITH YOUNGER CUSTOMERS TO GROW THE SHOOTING SPORTS

Bringing up young people in a constructive, informative and recreational shooting environment is the most productive way we can guarantee the future of the shooting sports for generations to come. Thanks to organizations like the NRA and NSSF, there are national programs for young shooters to partake in. As a firearms retailer, you have a unique opportunity to not only participate in the youth movement but also to build a profitable customer base.

This new customer trend has also received a boost by the rise of the bushcraft movement — which involves perfecting one's survival skills — as well as the slew of survival reality shows on television. Add in a host of high school and college shooting clubs and programs, and the landscape is ripe for expanding your profits in the youth market.

In most states, a customer has to be 18 years of age to purchase a firearm, but many young people receive training well in advance. Hoover Tactical Firearms in Hoover, Ala., is a firearms retailer and provides training programs at its indoor range. Some of the programs focus on youth, according to Kerry Bradley, Hoover Tactical general manager.

"We get involved with young people early through a national organization called Fresh Air Family. They have a program they started called 'Prepared Not Scared,' which is a camp for kids, 8–11, to teach them survival skills," Bradley informs. "The kids learn skills like finding water in the forest, building debris shelters, gun safety skills and calm thinking. It's a great way to reach young folks well before they are able to purchase a firearm."

At Hoover Tactical, many of the store's young first-time customers become established customers.

"We often get young shooters who come in and buy their first gun when they are of legal age, and about half of these become regular customers at our store," Bradley said. "The indoor range works to keep their attention and draws them in to hone their skills. I would say our young base is 70 percent male, 30 percent female under the age of 26. As these shooters get older, this balances out dramatically, closer to 55 percent male and 45 percent female."

WHAT YOUTH WANT

After a young person purchases their first firearm, it opens the door to a plethora of accessory sales for you — ranging from holsters and magazines, to optics and range bags. As a brick-and-mortar retailer, you have the distinct advantage of offering your young customer hands-on, tactile experience while viewing and handling your merchandise. You also have the benefit of lending your ability as a real, live sales representative who can explain various products to help ascertain their needs. In other words, you're at a huge advantage to cash in on secondary sales beyond the customer's initial firearm purchase.

With an indoor range adjoining a retail sales floor, Hoover Tactical is more oriented to tactical and target shooting. A handgun is more apt to be the first purchase their young customer makes.

FIREARMS INDUSTRY JOBS

JOBS.NSSF.ORG

Search for Jobs. Recruit Employees. Opportunity Awaits.

Hoover Tactical has hired younger employees, such as Range Instructor Justin Wilder, to better interact with younger customers at the point of purchase.

"Most young shooters tend to buy a 9mm handgun first. It's a common caliber, accurate round and easy to handle," said Justin Wilder, a 21-year-old range instructor at Hoover Tactical. "The most frequent second purchase (other than ammo) is a holster, then an extra magazine or two, and perhaps a mounted flashlight. They'll also buy a range bag if they're going to use it for target shooting."

Wilder also notes younger shooters tend to buy brighter clothing and accessories at his store.

Of course, young hunters and sport shooters (such as clay target shooting) are very different from tactical customers. Long guns, such as rifles and shotguns, are the initial purchase for these firearm users with extra magazines, carrying and storage bags/being top sellers. The mark-ups on these are substantial, and if your store has a combination of both tactical and outdoors products you'll be ready for either customer.

THANKS TO ORGANIZATIONS LIKE THE NRA AND NSSF, THERE ARE NATIONAL PROGRAMS FOR YOUNG SHOOTERS TO PARTAKE IN.

By far, your best opportunity for secondary sales — for any gun user — is at the point of purchase when the customer is buying their firearm. Your sales staff should be trained to ask the customer if they need a holster or case, extra magazines and other accessories every time they sell a firearm in order to maximize sales.

KEEP IN TOUCH

Young shooters are more active, so "on-the-go" mediums such as radio advertising and social media posts are more apt to catch their attention.

"We advertise with local radio stations and attend local gun shows whenever possible," Bradley lends. "Hoover Tactical just sponsored an outdoor expo, which was very successful in getting the word out on our store as well. We also have weekly IDPA-style shoots which bring out young people and we put on several fun shoots throughout the year to bring the young folks in."

INDUSTRY WATCH

Colt Rebuilds Commercial Business, Sets Bold Goals

By Russ Thurman

The message coming out of Colt's Manufacturing these days is laser focused on the future: Strong commercial sales growth, right-sizing product mix, refining distribution, enhancing dealer programs and creating a better customer experience.

Yes, the company has undergone financial challenges, filing Chapter 11 in June, but that's not the focus of company executives.

"We'll grow our commercial business north of 20 percent in 2016," said Paul S. Spitale, who joined Colt earlier this year as senior vice president of commercial programs. "We're excited about the future of our commercial business."

Spitale says Colt has a lot of room for growth.

"Colt plays in only 12 percent of the available commercial market. That fact is not lost on us, or our investors. So, as we build a new company that comes out of bankruptcy, we have a great opportunity to drive a new business with new models and a new level of capital infrastructure. It's going to be very strong."

This is not a new message from Spitale; he's been delivering it since earlier this year.

"As I said to everyone at the NRA Annual Meeting [in April], we're going to grow this business two and half times in the next three to four years. We stand by that," he said.

No easy task. However, the company has already made progress.

"When I joined the company, I had a number of priorities to rebuild our commercial business. One was to rationalize the product assortment and to make sure we were getting people what they were looking for. We did that early on. We went through a lot of work to make sure we had the right models, and secondarily, that they we're priced at market pricing," Spitale said.

Then the company addressed marketing.

"We eliminated some distribution; we also announced the Stocking Dealer Program to solidify and to ensure more customers got the right experience," Spitale said.

There is also the company's messaging.

"All our ads [publications, website] carry the message: 'Built One At A Time, Proven Every Round.' We want that to be consistent among all commercial touch points," Spitale added.

Had To Change

To attract more sales, Colt devoted a lot of resources to its product mix and pricing.

"We spent almost $1 million in rightsizing our product assortment and price points. We took out some models we should probably never have produced. In the past, when a customer came in to buy a Government Model, there wasn't a very well thought-out MSRP. That product is now indexed everyday at $799. We went to our distributing partners and price protected them for the inventory they already had and announced new price points: $799 for a Government, $899 for a Defender and $499 for the Mustang. These are the right kind of wheelhouse price points our consumers were looking for," Spitale said.

These and other changes were motivated by a visit Spitale made to 42 dealers in April.

"Only two of the dealers had Colts on their store floor. The problem we had was if someone called our customer service and asked where they could buy a Colt, we couldn't point them to a dealer with confidence. If they did go to a dealer who didn't have Colts, they'd often heard, 'I can get you one if you want, but I can sell you one of these from Springfield Armory, Ruger or Smith & Wesson.' That was incredibly damaging to our brand, basically, not having been in commercial spaces for 20 years, as much as we should have been. We had to change that," he said.

In May, the company launched the Colt Stocking Dealer Program. To qualify, dealers must have a retail establishment with hours open to the public and display a minimum of four Colt handguns and one rifle, with the same number in back stock. The program also requires Colt distributors to sell only to authorized Colt Stocking Dealers after Aug. 1, 2015, and Colt distributors and Colt would stop sales to "Internet-only dealers" and dealers without retail stores.

"Our original premise was if we could get 1,200 dealers who really supported our brand and carried just a basic assortment of Colts at the right prices we would do quite well," Spitale said.

By September, nearly 2,600 dealers had signed up to be Colt Stocking Dealers.

"Obviously, dealers want to have the brand. I think many of these dealers appreciate we put a lot more emphasis back on the customer experience," Spitale said, while pointing out the importance of choosing not to sell to dealers who don't have traditional storefronts.

"To think someone who really isn't invested in retail, isn't invested in Colt in terms of its training and making sure the customer experience is great — the fact they take a sale from a legitimate dealer, that's terrible," Spitale said.

Steps To Help

Has the program helped dealers sell more Colts?

"Yes, because our name is out there. Our listing on the [Colt] website has helped. There have been several people call who say, 'We saw your name on Colt's website and we're in your area,'" said Lee Keltner, who handles sales and gunsmithing at Wiley Guns in Willis Point, Texas.

"Colt is taking steps to help us. They've cut out someone who wasn't inventorying their guns. It keeps that guy from undercutting you when he's not truly participating in the business," said Todd Vance, owner of Vance Outdoors Inc. in Columbus, Ohio.

"The biggest thing I picked up from the program is the pricing for Colt firearms from distribution is more consistent and a tick less than it was before. That [pricing] allows me to lower some of my prices to the consumer and still make a good percentage," said Karl Durkheimer, owner of North West Armory in Portland, Ore. "I think they have a good start on the program, but I think there is a little bit more they can do."

Spitale says Colt is already working on enhancements to the program. One already underway is the Falls Carry Days promotion, which runs through the end of this month.

"That [pricing] allows me to lower some of my prices to the consumer and still make a good percentage."

—Karl Durkheimer, North West Armory owner

"That consumer promotion won't be executed outside of our stocking dealers, so, if someone is able to get our products through an unauthorized means, they will not be able to offer the promotion. That's the first; there are other things we're considering, which I can't announce right now, but we're looking to announce sometime in the spring," he said.

Spitale says he has a message for Colt Stocking Dealers.

"Thanks for saying, 'Yes' to Colt and being a part of our Stocking Dealer Program. I can't tell you how important this is because our commercial business is going to get stronger and stronger. We're producing almost twice as many handguns as we were back in April, and we're going to show new models at the SHOT Show. We're excited about the future of our commercial business," Spitale said.

We received a lot of news releases just before this past Labor Day, many of them saluting American work ethic and ingenuity.

None of the releases reflect those qualities more than the one featuring Lew Danielson, Crimson Trace founder. In the picture frame is Lew's original guiding principles and business plan for the company. It outlines the creation of quality products backed by world-class customer service. That was in 1994. By all measure, Lew has done what he set out to do, and more.

Salutes, Lew.

MOSSBERG® 500® - ATI® SCORPION SHOTGUN

LEGENDARY 500® PERFORMANCE, TEAMED WITH SPECIALIZED ATI TACTICAL COMPONENTS

The new 500 - ATI Scorpion is the perfect balance of time-tested Mossberg 500 reliability and the functionality of ATI components. Available exclusively through TALO Group Distributors*.

As functional as it is fierce-looking, the new Mossberg 500 - ATI Scorpion delivers the features that have made the 500 the pump-action of choice for millions worldwide: ambidextrous safety, dual extractors, positive steel-to-steel lockup, twin action bars, and a smooth operating anti-jam elevator. Now, Mossberg has teamed up with ATI to outfit this model with an exceptional set of components— bringing unprecedented stock, heat shield, side saddle and accessory rail options in a single coordinated package to the 500 family of tactical shotguns.

The ATI® T2 Tacti-Lite® 6-Position Stock provides a 3 1/8" LOP range; has a Scorpion® recoil-reducing recoil pad and grip pad; and a 1" adjustable cheek riser. Sling mounting options include a single-point sling mount insert above the grip (can face left or right, or switched to flush) and QD socket on the recoil pad.

The ATI® Halo® Heatshield is a free-float design with front/rear contact with the barrel. A front dovetail rail attachment comes with two 2" rails for accessory mounting convenience. A shield-mounted post front sight provides clear sighting.

The ATI® Halo® Side Saddle is made of tough anodized aluminum and mounted directly to the 500® shotgun's tapped receiver. Three aluminum Add-A-Shell® units are included, that mount to any of 9 possible positions. Each Add-A-Shell unit can be flipped 180° for user-preference of brass uptake or down orientation. A removable top rail provides for a variety of sight or accessory mounting options.
